EXPLAINING TOKENIZATION: A SIMPLE CONCEPT

Tokenization can seem complex, but it's actually quite simple.

Let's break it down with

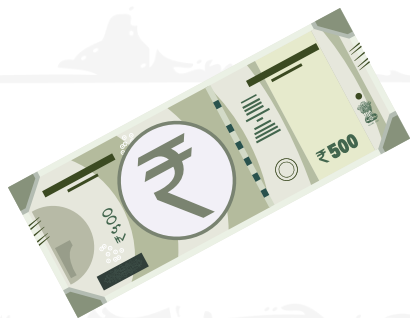

Examples: >>>

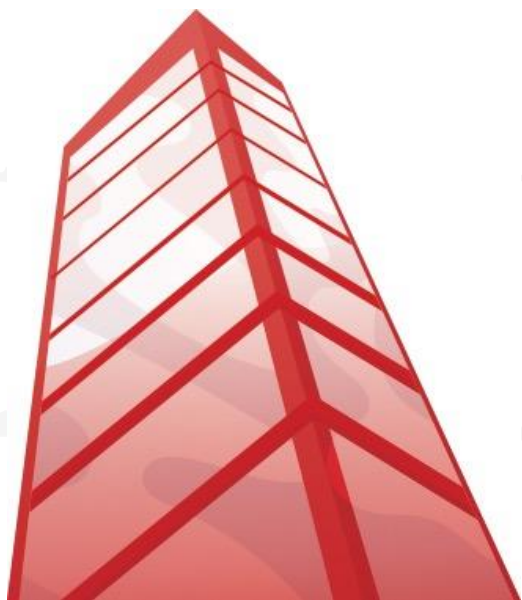

Pizza: Imagine a medium Domino's pizza divided into six equal slices. Each slice represents a fraction of the whole pizza. Tokenization works similarly — each “slice” (token) represents part of a property.

Currency: Think of exchanging a ₹500 note for five ₹100 notes. The five smaller notes represent the tokenized form of the original note.

Company Shares: A company with 1,00,000 shares allows each share to represent a portion of the company's ownership. Similarly, tokens represent a share of the real estate asset.

1,00,000

Tokenization turns physical assets into digital, tradable forms, making them more accessible and easier to manage.
